Lawyers for a Calgary couple charged with criminal negligence in the death of their toddler of complications from malnutrition will seek bail Tuesday.

But senior Crown prosecutor Shane Parker said Monday he is still considering whether to consent to the release of [REDACTED] and [REDACTED].

Parker said outside court after a brief appearance by the couple, he will only deal with judicial interim release if he can come to an agreement on bail conditions with their lawyers. Both Kaysi Fagan, for the father, and George Sirois, for the mom, appeared in provincial court on behalf of their clients.

Both told Judge Frank Maloney they will speak to the release of their clients when they return to court Tuesday.

[REDACTED], 34, and his wife, [REDACTED], 38, appeared separately via closed circuit TV from rooms at the Calgary Remand Centre.

They were arrested Saturday and charged in connection with the Nov. 28, 2013 death of their 14-month-old son, [REDACTED].

The [REDACTED] face charges of criminal negligence causing death, which carries a maximum sentence of life in prison, and failing to provide the necessities of life.
